Enter the Beauty Luncheon. The beauty luncheon is an open Span ish secret that has nothing to do with high combs, castanets, cigarettes or man-tillas, but much to do with clive oil, its raising, refining and exporting, which to the natives of the south of Spain is the ame as our cotton interests are to per le of our southern states. -The Span iards say that we people of the "New World" are very particular about our foods, over much so, in fact, to their thinking; but to hold our market they are sending only their finest olive oil an olives, and it is around these products that the beauty secret is woven. Were you ever invited to a beauty luncheon? Probably not, as they are very new and a Spanish idea entirely, but when the secret is more generally known their adoption will be quick and complete, for the fad has a reason back of it worth considering. Olive oil has always been looked upon as one of beauty's first sids, and every woman, who values a perfect complexion, has an ear ittuned to catch every new note sounded on the subject. Those who begin the use of clive oil as a beautifier rarely have to be urged to continue its use Eating a beautifier is pleasanter than an outward application, especially when I s as agreeable as olive oil.

A medical journal records the story of t he celebrated physician of the late King Edward for advice as to how she cou best retain her beauty, and the great man replied, "Take olive oil, live on it, live in it, live with it, eat it, drink it and lubricate the system with it." She followed the advice, and in a short time became the sponsor in England of the he oily secret in Spain. To-day the beauty luncheon has made Its American appearance and its popular-ity is increasing rapidly. The hostess for the first one went about preparing er table in Spanish colors to do hono the nation that is responsible for it painted basket, as a centerpiece, while at each place she put a red rose to which was tied a yellow place card, tied with narrow yellow and red ribbons. Yellow and red flowers were used with the greenery in decorating the rest of the room. Beside each plate little gilt bas-kets were filled with marzipan strawberries for the sweets, while all the lishes served were colored, or garnished with the Spanish colors. The menu, i elf, was strictly Spanish.

First a canape was served, the skinned and boned fish, placed on the toasted oblong, covered with strips of red pepdressing.

Then came Spanish chicken, cooked en casserole. This chicken in pipian is a typical Spanish dish, and is made in this way: take a young chicken, prepare and boil until tender, putting an onion, sliced, a cut bud of garlic, a few celery tops, a minced pepper, and a quarter cup of vinegar into the water. When the chicken is tender, cut in convenient pieces and place in the casserole, straining over it a pint or more of the broth. CASSEBOLE OF SWEET POTATOES AN MARSHMALLOWS Mash three or four large, fresh-boile sweet potatoes; add half a cup of granulated sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, milk enough to make the consistency of ordinary mashed potatoes, and, lastly, add one cup of chopped raisins. Put into a casserole, and cover the top with marshmallows, laid side by side. The dish should be prepared as quickly as possible, so that the heat of the potatoes may be retained, since this aids flavor and texture. Bake until the marshmallows are nicely browned. Serve as an entree, or with baked ham or broiled

HICKEN BROILED IN DOUBLE ROASTER Cut a five pound chicken, carefully cleaned, in halves, cutting through the breast and back. Set, skin side down, on a rack in a double roaster; sprinkle with salt.
